PART II TEACHING PLAN

Introduction

ATTENTION: As you have seen by the element drill that to become proficient in drill takes time and a lot of practice. Different people have different ways of calling commands and it takes time to get use to the style of the leader.

MOTIVATION: As you gain complete understanding of how each movement is done, the easier the drill will become.

OVERVIEW: Drill is hard to master. It will take time and practice. Getting use to the way the commands are given by each person also takes time and practice. Don't get impatient; it will soon fall into place.

TRANSITION: Do you, as an individual, believe that you are sufficiently knowledgeable to adjust to the different styles of calling commands without causing the rest of the element/flight to incorrectly interpret the given command? We will review any area that you feel additional coverage is needed. Are there any areas needing special attention? (NOTE: list the areas needing review and proceed.)

Body

The instructor will review all movements and commands using any previous instructed material listed below as needed. A reference to the appropriate drill and ceremonies manuals is encouraged.
